High Fire Guide

High Fire Guide

High Fire Cone 6 Data The following is an outline of what you can expect to encounter when firing any of Mayco's glazes to shelf cone 6. All colours were painted as directed on the jar label onto a high-fire greenware body. Any changes that took place in the colour or surface quality are described as accurately as possible. However, since these are only our descriptions it is recommended that you use these descriptions as a starting point and always test fire the glaze on your own high-fire body. Crazing is possible depending on the body you use. Food safe, lead-bearing glazes may NOT still be food safe at a high fire. Glazes rated non-toxic and food safe will remain so providing they do not craze. Although some Mayco glazes will fire up to shelf cone 10, we have not tested this temperature or included results at temperatures higher than shelf cone 6.

Due to their composition, the following do not withstand above shelf cone 05 firing.
